Weather challenges dams and drawdowns

By BRIGIT MCCALLUM
brigit@waterbororeporter.com

The recent heavy rains posed a challenge to those who manage both the dam at Little Ossipee Lake and Lake Arrowhead's Ledgemere Dam. Their responses were similar – quick action to begin to draw down the surface of each water body, to try to maintain as consistent a lake level as possible, and avert flooding with the resultant possible damage to waterfront properties.

Don Holden of East Waterboro, dubbed the "Dam Man" at Little Ossipee, was first alerted to the threat on Monday, Sept. 28. He was particularly concerned because the following Thursday was scheduled to be an early lake drawdown for the winter to give shoreline landowners more time and more access to their shoreline to do repairs on those years.

Going into action early Tuesday morning, Holden opened the gates that divide Little Ossipee from Lake Arrowhead, to begin to lower the lake level early in anticipation of the storm. Arrowhead is an artificially created water body that was developed in the 60's as part of Lake Arrowhead Community. At its other end, Lake Arrowhead is bounded and given its identity as a lake by the Ledgemere Dam, a power-generating facility owned by Epico USA, an Italian power-generation company with five hydroelectric dams in Southern Maine.

Based in its facility at Kezar Falls, Epico's Operations Manager Jeff Mellon of Limerick, began the drawdown Tuesday also, in advance of the roughly scheduled Oct. 20 annual drawdown on Lake Arrowhead. Because the turbine is undergoing maintenance, to lower the lake in anticipation of the storm, the floodgates were opened 75 percent to allow the water to flow out of the lake. Normally the crew would have sent the excess waterflow through the turbine, to generate power, while lowering the lake. Mellon estimates that they drew the lake down six inches by the time the heaviest rain started, so that the lake level changed about a foot between the lowering and rising from the rain.

While Holden and Mellon and his teammate Gavin Dixon of Newfield have a common goal of maintaining lake levels and preventing flooding, the two dams also function very differently. The Little Ossipee dam is set at a six-foot, six-inch level and Holden works to maintain the water level at two inches below the dam. With that heavy rain, he lowered both gates up to a foot to allow for enough runoff to occur. He reported that he was able to get the lake down one and a half inches before the heavy rain hit. At that point, the same amount was going out as the heavy rain was coming in. With no rain the lake would have been down three inches, but the more than five inches of heavy rain made the lake come up to a level 1 inch above where it started. At that point, the lake was coming up, even with the gates open.

When told that Little Ossipee lakefront resident Dr. Bill Taylor had reported a few days after the storm that he didn't notice the lake level change much from the Frank Juneau and Dale Michaud of Enerserve remove the blades from the Ledgemere Dam turbine in preparation for sending them to a machine shop for repair and possible replacement of a blade thicker than the other three. storm, Holden replied, "He didn't because it changed very little. On Oct. 1, I did not make any adjustment to the gates because they were already open. At this time the lake was dropping, but not as fast as if we had never gotten any rain."

Ledgemere Dam is a two-part dam, composed of a timber crib filled with rock and covered by a concrete cap. The area from the dam to the nearby boat launch forms an earthen embankment dam. Passersby see the concrete structure upon which two-inch thick and twelve-foot long hemlock boards are set as flasher boards. Prior to 2011, the four-foot high flasher board system was built of plywood, which was a weaker component of the dam. The new boards are going into their fourth winter, and Mellon hopes, with some repair before winter, they will hold up well. The top twelve-inch board of the flashers is set with pins that, when the water pressure builds at the top, it can break the pins and flex that top board, easing pressure on the rest of the wood portion of the dam. If necessary, the entire flasher section will give way. The crew works to prevent that as much as possible by opening the spillway when necessary.

The Waterboro select board regulates activity at the Little Ossipee dam. Ledgemere, because it is both a power generating facility and rates as a high hazard dam, with homes in its flood plain, is highly regulated. Both the Saco River Corridor Commission and the Department of Environmental Protection regulate it on local and state levels, while the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission sends representatives for annual inspections. The two lakes have very different sources. Small brooks, springs, rainfall and spring snow melt basically feed Little Ossipee. Lake Arrowhead receives waters from Little Ossipee Pond, Little Ossipee River, Pickerel Pond and Sokokis Lake in Limerick, a number of small brooks and streams, and of course rainfall and snow melt in spring.

Besides the maintenance of the dam at Ledgemere, there is another function that the crew serves, that of water monitoring for dissolved oxygen levels in both Lake Arrowhead and Little Ossipee River as part of the Maine Volunteer lake Monitoring Project. Data is sent to the MVLMP and on to the DEP. This data is important to determine whether conditions are optimal

Quilters show their stuff

By ALLISON WILLIAMS
awilliams@waterbororeporter.com

That quilting is an art left solely to grandmothers and great aunts is a false claim, as anyone could see after visiting the Circle of Friends Quilt Show on Oct. 4 in the Alfred Parish Church. There were 170 quilts displayed by over 100 quilters. There were also hooked pieces, large and small, by very talented crafters. It took a while to view everything and then to visit the vendors mall next door where it was possible to buy lunch, see a penny rug demonstration, buy tickets which benefited the organ donation project at Maine Medical Center, buy a raffle ticket or supplies. The raffle item, a crazy quilt made by Annie Jones, was won by Ann Dugovic.

The show was sponsored by the two quilting groups which meet in Conant Chapel under the teaching team of Janet Allen (Wednesday Girl Quilters) and Annie Jones, (Annie's Teeny Tiny Quilt Shop) mother and daughter, on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The quilters came from all over the state and beyond. Especially lovely was a Victorian crazy quilt made by Pat Vertefeuille's grandmother from 1902 to 1906 in Oxford, Nova Scotia. She explained they had owned a haberdashery; it was made of velvet scraps enhanced by decorative stitching. It will be sent back to Oxford, to be donated to the museum.

One of the most unusual articles was a runner created from small stand-up wool pieces rolled and attached to each other. Blues and greens faded to yellow which transitioned to orange, then red and rose. This was produced by Mary Delano of Norway, Maine. But there were many others demonstrating how far quilting has come from necessity to art.

Development of Maine atlas

Dr. Richard Judd of the University of Maine gave a free-flowing account on Oct. 5 at the Alfred Shaker Museum telling the how and why behind the production of a "Historical Atlas of Maine." He and Stephen J. Hornsby are co-editors of the lavish volume that came out last year from the University of Maine Press and sold out in weeks. A second printing is now available.

For context, he explained he arrived in Maine in 1984 and taught courses on the state's history for several years without a textbook because there was none. Simple substitutes used included a compilation of important Maine documents. Eventually he collaborated with two others and produced "The Pine Tree State: From Prehistory to the Present." Soon Amy Hassinger did a book for middle and high school students called "Finding Katahdin" which met state requirements for those grades. Then the Folklife Center at UMO delivered oral histories in the wake of Stewart Hall Holbrook's "Yankee Loggers: A Recollection of Woodsmen, Cooks and River Drivers" and the Maine Memory Network was developed.

The new atlas was the brainchild of Burton Hatlen, dean of the university's College of Arts and Sciences. Hatlen drew together a steering committee which had no real familiarity with an atlas but ideas gradually developed. They worked with cartographers to produce maps with short text blocks and overlaid them with information produced by new technologies. Colored art works were included, old photographs and bird's eye view maps. Readers could see the way port cities were planned: docks near the water, then warehouses, then a financial district followed governmental and commercial sectors. He presented a slide show of plates from the book illustrating his points.

The Sunday, Oct. 25 speaker in the series will be Native American historian and artist George Neptune whose work will be included in the Portland Museum of Art's new exhibition which opened Oct. 8. His artistic specialty is basket-making. His talk will begin at 1:30 and is free to the public.

Anita Sanchez, a botanist and writer and the author of "Mr. Lincoln's Chair" was one of the speakers in this series. A video of the Sanchez talk in this 150th anniversary of the Civil War is now posted at the museum's web site at www.alfredshakermuseum.org. The Friends of the Shaker Museum hope that local schools will take advantage of these talks and incorporate them in their curricula.

Town hall

Permits issued in September by Jim Allaire, the code enforcement officer, included one to Paul Buro of Shady Lane for removal of hazard trees; to Amy Boothby of Penny Lane for a home occupation for signs; to Atoinette Rodriguez of Leisure Drive to put in a 10' by 10' open deck; to Richard Audia of Golden Era Circle to close in an existing porch and to York County on Jordan Spring Road for interior demolition.

Town Clerk Andy Bors reports there were 4 deaths in September, 5 burial permits issued, 2 marriages, 2 altered dogs licensed and 4 hunting and fishing licenses sold.

Keywood Manor

The Keywood Manor Activities Council will hold its monthly free movie matinee on Thursday, Oct. 22 at 1 p.m. in the community center. The feature will be "The Second Best Exotic Marigold Hotel" with Judi Bench.

The November movie will be shown on the third Thursday, Nov. 19 due to Thanksgiving being on the 4th Thursday which is the usual movie date. There will be no movie in December.

There are still a few 6-foot tables left for the Nov. 7 craft and bake sale. Hosts are Paul and Judy Dutton. Volunteers are needed to help. There is a sign up sheet on the activities table in the hall.

Parish church

On Monday, Oct. 12, area churches will be joining together by meeting to serve some of the needs of those experiencing challenging times. North Parish UCC will be open 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. to provide breakfast and lunch, free haircuts, activities for children and winter clothing. There will also be free health screenings and much information about area resources. Last year over 230 persons were served by the Day of Caring.

The Women's Guild will meet Tuesday, Oct. 13 at 1 p.m. in the Alfred Village Museum. Three Alfred signature quilts are still on display. The displays will be taken down the next evening when the Alfred Historical Committee meets. The Neighbors in Need offering will be taken Sunday, Oct. 18.

The free supper on Oct. 26 will feature lasagna, salad, garlic bread and pumpkin desserts. Volunteers are appreciated.

DAMS CHALLENGED

for fish health. Cool water is able to hold more dissolved oxygen, which is essential for fish. Arrowhead offers a challenge because it is so shallow, and the water heats rapidly in sunlight. Thus, maintaining what depths they can by regulating runoff is another function of dam regulation. Fish spawn in the spring, which is also when repairs in the dam are often needed after winter, with ice breaking up and rivers rising with spring melt. So the time of winter's end and the beginning of spring is one of the hardest times of the year to balance all of the needs the dam serves.

There is another significant dammed humanly constructed water body in Waterboro, and it is shared with Shapleigh, called Lake Sherburne. This lake is located in the western part of Waterboro, where West Road meets Newfield Road and becomes Ross Corner Road. The dam on Lake Sherburne is a reinforced earthen dam, it is owned by the Lake Sherburne Association. The association maintains the dam and tests the water quality of the lake. According to Lake Association member Richard Anderson, "We monitor the lake during severe weather and can open it if needed. The last time that happened was several years ago on Patriots Day. Since then we've altered the emergency runoff so that the lake maintains the proper level." According to Anderson, the gate is open on April 15 and closed on

Oct. 15 as required by the state. Anderson added, "We have been extremely lucky because for over twenty years we've had a knowledgeable and devoted dam Chairman Bill Gurrissi, known on the lake as 'The Dam Guy.' He and his small group of volunteers go out in all kinds of weather to repair the dam and perform preventive maintenance; if it weren't for this group the dam would be in sore shape."

Mellon reminds Lake Arrowhead lakefront homeowners and those who have boats in the lake, that winter drawdown will begin between Oct. 20 and 25, depending on weather, while the Little Ossipee drawdown is already underway, and Lake Sherburne will start on Oct. 15.

FIELD HOCKEY

Trojans defeat Mustangs

BY MICHAEL DEANGELIS
mdeangelis@waterbororeporter.com

Libby Pomerleau scored in the first minute of play and host Thornton Academy (10-2) broke a 3-3 tie late in the second half to capture a hard fought win over Massabesic in varsity girls' field hockey on Tuesday, Oct. 6.

The Mustangs (8-3) galloped into the contest behind the strength of eight consecutive wins, but the Trojans were undaunted, having won six of their last seven.

A quick start was the difference, as Thornton's Libby Pomerleau, from Limerick, marched downfield off the opening draw and rifled home a score to put the Trojans up 1-0 in the first minute of play.

Thornton Academy got a boost from the early score, and they went on the attack and continued to carry the play for the better part of the first half where Massabesic net minder Kelley Wescott (14 saves) was at her busiest and best.

Still, the Trojans went into the break up 2-0, and Massabesic was left wondering if they could locate their offense.

They hit their stride and found their offense in the second half as Maggie Redman cut the lead in half with an assist from Logan Champlin. Emma Desrochers followed with a goal of her own to level the score at two, with Redman on the assist.

The Trojans went up 3-2 with seven minutes left, but Desrochers evened it again shortly thereafter, and the seesaw affair had the large crowd engrossed.

The home contingent didn't have to wait long as Pomerleau potted her second, the game-winner, just over one minute later.

The Mustangs pressed late, and they knocked a shot off the goal post from a corner as time expired in the loss.

The Trojans hold the third spot in the heal standings and the Mustangs the fifth.

Homecoming

Oxford Hills/Buckfield picked up their first win of the season over a winless Mustangs squad on Friday, Oct. 2. The home game marked the annual homecoming event for Massabesic. ## CROSS COUNTRY

XC ladies 7th, men 25th at Belfast Festival draws 1400+ runners

By MICHAEL DEANGELIS
mdeangelis@waterbororeporter.com

More than 620 runners from 54 high schools took to the starting line at the annual Festival of Champions cross country meet, held Saturday, Oct. 3 in Belfast, and the lady Mustangs turned in a superb performance with a 7th-place finish overall.

Nationally ranked La Salle, RI took the top spot with just 30 team points (1,2,3,5,19) behind the strength of four top ten finishes. Orono was second with 128, Cumberland, RI was next with 141. Eliza Rego had the best time 18:05.58. Just five runners finished under the 19-minute mark.

Locally, there were strong results which should set the stage for exciting regional and state meets, as Falmouth finished fifth with 267, Cape Elizabeth was next with 301 and Massabesic (41,51,65,72,94) had 323. Scarborough (452) was 12th and Bonny Eagle (488) was 14th

Senior Emily Wasina led the way for the Mustangs with a 41st-place finish. Her time of 20:21.35 was just one of 72 to come in under the 21-minute mark. Freshman Kylie Johnson impressed as well with a 51st-place finish at 20:36.40.

Maquila DiMastrantonio joined the under 21 club in 65th, Roshelle Morrison was 72nd, Brianna Drew came in 94th and, for an added measure of strength, Massabesic had Emily Cyr at 100 and Hallie Benton at 108.

On the men's side it was even more massive as over 800 runners from 65 high schools took part. The Mustangs turned in a respectable 25th-place finish in what turned out to be a Maine dominated event. Scarborough (4,5,7,39,65) took the top spot with just 120-points. Cumberland, RI was runner-up with 162 and Falmouth was third with 187. Bonny Eagle was two spots in back of Massabesic in 27th.

Junior Isaac Libby turned in a 17:51.35, good for 79th place overall and he was just one of 90 runners to crack the 18:00 minute mark. Osman Doorow, a senior from Lewiston, blew the field away with a 15:50.05

Fresh faces sparkle Scots, Mustangs shine at Belfast

About 20 percent of the runners (135) in the ladies' division were freshman and the results, at least locally, were impressive. Kayla Raymond (19:58.91), from Bonny Eagle finished 31st overall, but she was third in the battle of the rookies. Fellow Scots Ami Beaumier was 44th and fifth for freshman and Abby Nelson was 129th and the 28th overall freshman. Mustang Kylie Johnson, 51st, was two spots behind Beaumier with a 7th-place finish.

More than 200 of the men that competed were freshmen. Scot Cam Marston was 37th in the rookie battle and Mustang Tim Zimmerman was 51st.

OPINION

The Wiley Fox and the Crazy Wabbit

by Jon Simonds

Unbeknownst to many, Bernie Sanders has something in common with Bugs Bunny. Both came to be in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. Folklore has the very liberal and always politically incorrect rabbit, born in a warren on July 27, 1940 underneath the Pitchers mound of Ebbets Field, where the old Brooklyn Dodgers used to play. Bernie was born just a stones throw away on Sept. 8, 1941. Bugs' is 75 years old. Bernie is 74. And while there is no way to put that "crazy wabbit" in the White House, there is no shortage of cartoon characters running for its occupancy. Bernie, the "wily fox," just isn't one of them.

This was supposed to be the summer of Hillary, but the little known Senator from Vermont has taken Hillary's runaway lead in the polls and cut it down to just 21 percent in the State of Iowa. Recent polls show if the electorate voted tomorrow in New Hampshire, Bernie would beat Hillary by as much as 10 percent. How has such a little known Senator from Vermont captured the nations attention?

The middle class in this country isn't struggling. It isn't even collapsing. It's just plain dead. They've become the working poor as more and more companies increase CEO salaries for coming up with ideas to dump employees. Most of who end up rehired as subcontractors.

You want a company that believes in building a stronger middle-class? Think UPS who pay drivers a livable wage, offer health benefits, vacation time and a pension. They value a strong America and accept responsibility (as in liability) for all those trucks rolling across our nation.

You want a company that could care less? Look at your cable provider, relying on a cable subcontracting company who relies on cable subcontractors. You know the twenty-dollar on time guarantee you're promised if your installer doesn't show up on time? Your cable company isn't losing a dime. It's deducted from the subcontractor who installed your cable. Here's a business model that could care less about building a better America because they are so consumed with building a stronger company which makes for greater stock and bigger returns to it's investors.

Bernie wants to change this because Bernie cares. Bernie wants to take on the one percent and make sure the 99 get their due. He is promising to make this Nation great again by investing in our future with the tools of a free higher education. He believes in Health Care for all. He wants to bolster American wages thus battering the anger burning from sea to shining sea. He wants to clobber billionaires stashing cash in foreign countries and make them pay their share.

Make no mistake about it. The Democratic nomination still belongs to Hillary but support for the Wiley Fox is growing with such fury he may yet borrow a line from that crazy wabbit. You know, the one where Bugs looks directly into the camera and says; "Gee! Ain't I a stinker?"

Jon Simonds lives in North Waterboro and is the author of "Brooklyn Encounters," a collection of short stories available on Kindle.

LYMAN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL NEWS

Joy Spencer

Would you know what to do if you smelled smoke in your house, but couldn't see it because your door was closed? The children at Lyman Elementary School do. Firefighters from the Goodwins Mills Fire and Rescue presented a safety program to all of the students geared to their grade level. Captain Rob Lang involved the pupils by asking them what they would do in the event that they found themselves in different situations. For instance, "What would you do if your clothes caught on fire?" "What should you do if there was fire in your house?" "What is meant by a Safe Place?" "How do you know if you should open your door?" "What should you do if you can't open your door?"

Firefighter, Rocky Sanfilippe, demonstrated how to put on all of the necessary equipment to keep him safe while fighting a fire. Captain Lang named and explained each piece as Rocky donned it. This included pants with suspenders, boots, a hood to protect his ears, a jacket bearing his name, an air tank strapped to his back and connected to a mask to protect him from breathing in smoke, a helmet to safeguard his head and face, fire-proof gloves for his hands and a microphone to help him to talk through the mask. When Rocky was all fitted up, Captain Lang asked the children if he was scary. Some of the audience replied, "Yes" so he asked if they would hide if they saw someone dressed like that. He advised the children to stay in sight of a window so the firefighter could know what room they were in.

Captain Lang also showed the students a funny but educational video titled "Safety Smart." The teachers were given coloring pages and stickers to hand out at the end of the day. Children in grades 4 and 5 will enter their pictures in a contest. The winner will earn a ride to school in one of the fire trucks. Captain Matt Duross and Cole Tarbell were present to answer questions and drive two of the trucks to the school to show to the children.
