Local painter depicts stories

BY JOANNE BARGIONI

“Almost all my paintings are taken from local stories and legends, funny stories or tragedies,” spoke Sara Louise Tremblay at her recent art Exhibit held at the Acton-Shapleigh Historical Society building at 122 Emery Mills Road.

Paintings, both large in scale and small, were on exhibit and available for sale by the artist. Tremblay explained that she was born in Connecticut and moved to Acton in 1982 when she was 12 years old. She let Maine inspire her sense of discovery and traveled to the seashore and into the woods. Her first inspiration was her mother, who also liked to paint.

Tremblay attended Acton Elementary School, and after graduating from Wells High School, she married Gary Tremblay and raised five children. It was always her dream to paint, but she waited until her children were grown before pursuing this dream in earnest. She honed in on her craft at York County Community College.

At the exhibit, she demonstrated to the audience her painting technique. Sometimes photographs inspire her, and she will go outside to match the colors of nature. Using either oil or acrylic paints, she tends to use just three different style brushes (she doesn't like to paint fine items)

Kids planting workshop held free at Lyman farm

Over 100 children and adults attended a ‘kids planting workshop’ held on Earth Day, April 22 at the greenhouse center at Tibbetts Farm, on Clark’s Woods in Lyman.

The free workshop was hosted by the York County Farm Bureau as a way to celebrate Earth Day and agriculture. Tibbetts farm owner, Jonathan Tibbetts, is the current president of York County Farm Bureau and owns the farm with his wife Kelly, who says she hopes to make this an annual event.

Attendees were split into smaller groups and worked in stations, including a preschool group from The Gorham House Preschool in Gorham. Everyone got a tour of the greenhouses, with a kid’s scavenger hunt and even a story time focused on plants and insects. After, the kids got to plant a flower or vegetable of their choice and learn about the process of growing it. “They also were able to pet a couple sheep that we brought down,” said Kelly.

Each kid got to take their seedlings home and they also got a goody bag full of Earth Day activities and seeds to plant at home.

Mae Herrick, a junior from Massabesic High School, volunteered at the farm for the day, running the story time station. “She did an excellent job getting the kids involved, moving and learning,” said Kelly.

According to Kelly Tibbetts, the York County Farm Bureau (YCFB) focuses on workshops that promote agriculture in our area. “YCFB hasn’t been able to hold in person events since COVID so this was our first attempt at an in-person event since everything closed down in 2020.”

For more information about the YCFB, find them on the Maine Farm Bureau website at <https://www.maine farmbureau.us/counties/york>.

Tibbetts Farm opened for the season on April 29. Visit them online at <http://www.tibbettsfarm.com> or find them on Facebook.

75-year-old man
drowns when boat capsizes

A 75-year-old Perry man drowned on May 3 when the boat he was working in overturned on a small remote pond in Downeast Maine.

Lindon Rockwell, age 75, of Perry, was tending baitfish traps on East Pike Brook Pond at approximately 1:20 in the afternoon, and when he leaned over to check one of his traps, the 12-foot aluminum boat he was in overturned, throwing him into the water without a lifejacket.

Rockwell's two friends on shore saw the boat overturn, and immediately called 911. They were over 350 yards away, and without another boat, they were unable to get to Rockwell. They encouraged Rockwell to swim to shore, but with the cold water temperatures and no lifejacket, Rockwell was unable to swim and drowned.

Epping and Deblois fire departments were the first on the scene, followed by members of the Maine Warden Service, Maine Marine Patrol, and the Maine Forest Service. One firefighter wearing a survival suit was able to swim to the overturned boat, and recovered the body at approximately 2:30 p.m.

Rockwell was not wearing a lifejacket, but one was found floating in the water near the boat, and another was stuffed under the bow of the overturned boat.

"Inland waters are still extremely cold this time of year, and hypothermia can set in quickly," said Game Warden Joe McBrine, "wearing a lifejacket can save your life if you find yourself in the water unexpectedly."

Rockwell was transported by Cherryfield Ambulance Company to the McLure Funeral Home in Machias. East Pike Brook Pond is located north of Cherryfield and east of Deblois in Washington County.

FROM THE MAINE BUREAU OF PARKS & LANDS

Boating season is here

Maine is blessed with water. Here's an interesting fact: with more than 5,000 lakes and ponds in our state, if you explored a different lake each day of the summer, it would take you more than 53 years to see them all! While that's unfortunately not possible (at least not at my age), with the ice finally gone from our rivers and lakes, many of us are turning to our canoes, kayaks, outboards, and fishing rods.

Boating in Maine soared during the pandemic, like all forms of outdoor recreation. According to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis, in 2020 boating and fishing saw an increase of 27% in the value added to Maine's economy. With more Maine families and visitors on the water, boating safety has never been more important.

The Bureau's Navigational Aids program cooperates in a nationwide waterway marking system on approximately 40 of Maine's most heavily used lakes. The system uses nearly 2,500 waterway markers (buoys), as recommended by the U.S. Coast Guard, to minimize hazards to navigation. These markers are skillfully maintained by Navigational Aids Supervisor Tim Thurston, Navigational Aids Crew Leader Jacob Rideout, and their seasonal assistants. Tim has also developed a sophisticated process for tracking the location and condition of these buoys, allowing the program to deploy and maintain them in a highly efficient manner. Meanwhile, Boating Facilities Maintenance Supervisor Bill Cunningham and his team effectively oversee the operations of more than 60 BPL boat launches across the state. Maintenance crews install boarding floats, mow lawns, and repair boat ramps, and in the winter months they construct new boarding floats. Overall, BPL's Boating Program is led by Tom Linscott, (Director of Boating Facilities) with the capable assistance of Heather Seiders (Outdoor Recreation Planner). BPL also coordinates closely with the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife for boating safety and enforcement issues. The Boating Division also oversees a grant program to assist municipalities in providing public boating access.

As you launch your boat this summer, remember to be smart, safe, and respectful of others, and appreciate all those who work to make your boating experience an enjoyable one.

Matthew 25:35 Meals in Sanford to return to in-person dining on May 10

On Tuesday, May 10, teens from St. Thérèse of Lisieux Parish in Sanford and Holy Spirit Parish in Kennebunk and Wells will do what they do on the second Tuesday of every month: serve a free meal and cheer to anyone in need of either.

The difference will be that for the first time in over two years, the meal will return to an in-person format at St. Ignatius Gym on 25 Riverside Avenue in Sanford. All are welcome to enjoy a free delicious pasta dinner, fresh bread, salad, beverages, and even dessert. Meals will be served from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Now in its fifth year, the Matthew 25:35 Meals have become a community staple, a place to be reminded of the kindness of strangers, the enthusiasm of Catholic youth, and the power of service. Devised as a way in which to teach local teens about the importance of giving back, particularly the Bible verse Matthew 25:35 (“For I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink, a stranger and you welcomed me...”), the dinners have become so much more. They have built community, delivered delicious food and joy, and inspired generosity. It’s an initiative that has brought support from local businesses and organizations that are moved by its motivation.

“Over the past five years, the St. Mary’s Ecumenical Food Pantry in Wells has provided food, Congdon’s Doughnuts has provided our condiment containers and flatware packets. When they were trying to get us take-out containers, one of their vendors, Favorite Foods, decided to just donate hundreds of take-out containers to the project. Parishioners donate gift cards, fruit cups, and cookie packages. After our first meal when it became apparent that we would need portable electric roaster ovens, the Springvale Knights of Columbus just went out and bought them for us. This has truly been a blessing,” said Carolyn Houston, director of faith formation at Holy Spirit Parish.

The path to this successful ministry has not been without obstacles. Like most programs, the Matthew 25:35 Meals were temporarily halted by the pandemic, unable to operate for a few months in 2020. Under the conditions, to quickly return, the sit-down meal approach was altered.

“Our team at Holy Spirit and St. Thérèse of Lisieux brainstormed about how we would tackle the COVID-19 dilemma and somehow get a hot meal to those in need,” said Lisa White, a catechist at Holy Spirit Parish. “What an amazing team effort it was.”

Curbside service to cars and pedestrians was the answer. There was trepidation about how the new format would be received but thankfully, those concerns were short-lived.

“We were very nervous about how it would go for our first meal since the pandemic began, but at the end of the night, we were thrilled with the turnout and how well our plans were implemented without incident,” said Lisa. “With the teens standing outside taking orders, they were able to be more visible to the public and interact more with patrons. The teens did their jobs so well. It made me proud to see them at work, making an impact on the community and being the hands and feet of Christ.”

“I think the curbside meals taught our youth that service isn’t about convenience. If there is a need and an obstacle to addressing that need, we as a community should find a way to overcome the obstacle,” said Carolyn. “We are so blessed with a caring community.”

A caring community that will now once again be able to sit down at carefully set tables for a meal and do it together.

“My prayer is that all who serve and all whom we serve are able to see that these kinds of small gestures are driven by the same Spirit who cherishes each one of us,” said Carolyn.

Donations labeled “Matthew Meal” can be dropped off at either St. Martha Church (30 Portland Road in Kennebunk) or St. Mary Church (236 Eldridge Road in Wells). For more information or if you can help the cause with a financial donation, contact Carolyn Houston at 985-6252 or carolyn.houston@portlanddiocese.org.

and 5 to 6 basic colors, which she mixes to create a myriad of hues.

Walnut oil is used to thin out the paint. Other chemicals are used as fixatives and to preserve the colors.

One of her paintings, the Horse's Head, is inspired by a local story from Shapleigh. Tracey Levasseur, President of ASHS, explained the legend. In 1801, a traveling Reverend named Bryant was on his way to deliver a sermon in Shapleigh. He stopped at the Hasty Farm overnight, and the following day Rev. Bryant set out with Mr. Hasty to attend the sermon and rode on horseback through the Blueberry Plains. Mr. Hasty returned home without the Reverend, and the Reverend was never found, although his horse returned. It was reported that if you go through the plains, strange occurrences and apparitions can be seen. A boy only known by the name of Joe was heading home through the plains, and his horse got spooked. The horse refused to move, and an apparition appeared to Joe. He said his name was Rev. Bryant, and he was murdered. He took Joe to where he was murdered. The specter said now that someone knew the truth, he could rest in peace and vanished. This is the legend that Tremblay captured in the Horse's Head painting, setting the mood in dark colors with the look of terror in the horse's eyes.

In her painting "Gateway to Acton and Shapleigh," Tremblay was inspired by the famous poem by Robert Frost, "The Road Not Taken." It is a painting of a fork in the road, one road going to Acton and the other to Shapleigh (see photo to the right).

Tremblay is interested in local stories. If you have an interesting tale to tell you can contact her and tell her your tale. She said, "there are always more stories left paint."

If you would like to learn more about the artist or to purchase a painting, you can contact her at sara@saralouisetremblay.com or call at 284-3871. You can also see more on Tremblay's website at www.saralouisetremblay.com.

MAINE BUREAU OF PARKS & LANDS RECOMMENDED READ:

'Still They Remember Me'

"Still they Remember Me" is a collection of thirteen stories that follow the journeys of the young Gluskabe as he grows and learns from the teachings of his grandmother, Woodchuck. These traditional stories are told in a way that bring balance to the landscape and communicate the values of the Penobscot Nation for generations past, present, and future.

The stories were first published in 1918 by anthropologist Frank Speck as told by Penobscot elder Newell Lyon. Together, they worked to develop the earliest writing system for the Penobscot language, a language that was being lost to forced assimilation, displacement, and discrimination.

Authors Carol A. Dana, Margo Lukens, and Conor M. Quinn transcribed the stories into current Penobscot orthography and present them in both the Penobscot language and English, side-by-side, with individual words and phrases translated in a way that makes the reader consider their emphasis and meaning from the Penobscot perspective, rather than an English interpretation.

"Still They Remember Me" Penobscot Transformer Tales, Volume 1 by Carol A. Dana, Margo Lukens, and Conor M. Quinn COURTESY IMAGE

Antrim fans 16, Mustangs 4-1

By MICHAEL DEANGELIS
Sports Editor

Emily Antrim retired 16 of the 18 batters she faced via strikeout and the Mustangs offense gave the hard-throwing righty all the runs she'd need with a four-run fourth inning to help post an 11-0 thumping of host Noble on Monday, May 2. Antrim got the rally going in the fourth that led to four runs with a leadoff walk. Candace Daigle singled with one down to put runners on the corners. Kate Boissonneault drove in Maddy Gray, who ran for Antrim, with a single and Ava Theriault drove in another with a groundout to make it 2-0. Massabesic added two more runs in the inning on an error and a sacrifice fly from Kendall Tetu. Antrim gave up a bunt single to open the bottom of the fourth in a brief glimmer of hope for the Knights, but darkness came quickly after the next three hitters went down all on K's on just 11 pitches. Antrim fanned the side in the first, fourth, fifth and sixth and finished with an eye-popping line of 6IP, 3H, 16K. She threw just 78 pitches with 66 of them strikes.

"Emily was incredible today, changeup was filthy," said head coach Kevin Tutt. "We had a nice fourth inning and added on later to help her out."

The Ella's, Donovan and Barden, got the Mustangs going in the fifth. Donovan got hit by a pitch leading off and Barden singled. Antrim lined out to right field, Donovan moved to third and Barden moved to second on the first pitch to Ava Gerrish putting two in scoring position. A wild pitch plated Donovan and Daigle knocked in Barden with the sixth run after Gerrish had reached on a walk.

The Mustangs got five more in the sixth. Donovan knocked in Katherine Hanlon with a sharp single to left and Barden drove in another with a groundout. Antrim singled home Donovan to make it 9-0 and Daigle followed another Gerrish walk with an RBI single. Boissonneault got the final run home with a fielder's choice grounder.

Massabesic banged out 11 hits in a 9-5 win over visiting Marshwood on April 2. Ellie Salvatore had a superb game. She pitched the first six innings and gave up two earned runs while fanning seven and walking just two. Salvatore had an inside-the-park two-run home run, and she added a single and scored twice. Catcher Ella Barden had a double and a pair of singles.

The Mustangs edged Kennebunk 6-5 on April 29. Antrim went the distance, fanning nine and giving up four earned-runs on 11 hits. Boissonneault had a huge hit during a four-run third inning. She drove in Gerrish and Gray with a bases loaded single to make it 4-1 and she scored on a single by Tetu later in the inning. The Rams came right back at the Mustangs with two in their half of the third and they added a lone run in the fourth to chop the lead down to 5-4. Massabesic played small-ball in the fifth to grab what ended up being the winning run. Maddy Gray led with a walk and Boissonneault bunted her over to second. Katie Lessard knocked in Gray with a clutch single to make it 6-4 and provide the winning run.

Sanford tops Deering

Libby Alexander drove in five runs and Hannah Mueller scored four times to help lift Sanford to a 16-5 win over host Deering in varsity girls' softball on Saturday, April 30. Madison Sheppard pitched the first three and one third innings, whiffing six and giving up no hits. Julissa McBaron drove in three runs for the Spartan's who moved their record to 2-1 in the early going.

GIRLS LACROSSE

LAX ladies start 3-0 Race back to win home opener

By MICHAEL DEANGELIS
Sports Editor

Massabesic's varsity girls' lacrosse team fell behind 3-0 early, but they roared back with six consecutive goals to come away with an 8-4 win in the season home opener over Cape Elizabeth on Saturday, April 30. Emily Jacobs got the Mustangs on the scoreboard, making it 3-1 Cape, just prior to the halfway mark of the first half. Bri Stephenson made it 3-2 just 18 seconds later and when Micaela Jacobs (2G, 3A) scored unassisted at the 16:54 mark the game was tied, but the Mustangs had seized control of the contest.

Emily Jacobs (hat trick and a helper) closed the first half scoring with her second goal, giving Massabesic a lead they'd never relinquish. Next, Shea Lane hooked up with Stephenson to push the lead two goals and Emily Jacobs followed with a goal at 7:14 to make it 6-3 and complete the turnaround from 0-3 down.

Claire McDonald scored her second goal after Emily completed her hat trick, keeping Cape within striking distance at 6-4, but Stephenson quickly bumped it to 7-4 and Micaela closed out the scoring late, with sister Emily assisting. Taylor Lombard was solid in net for Massabesic, turning aside several threats while the game was still on the line.

The Mustangs posted book-end routs around the Cape Elizabeth contest. They began their schedule with a visit to Portland on April 26 and banged out a 15-3 win in a rain-soaked affair. On Tuesday, May 3 Massabesic moved their record to 3-0 with a 14-6 trouncing of host Thornton Academy.

Tracie Lynn Daney
 Tracie Lynn Daney, 48, of Sanford, Maine passed away unexpectedly from a medical condition on April 29, 2022.

Tracie Lynn Daney

She was born on Oct. 24, 1973 to her parents Stanley G. Daney JR and Tambre Lee Daney.

Tracie grew up in Sanford, Maine and was a scholar at living a life full of joy. Tracie had wildflowers in her eyes, she was feisty with the spirit of a lion, heart filled with love and compassion for others. Her zest for life showed through all her crazy shenanigans. She loved to make people laugh and would always try to lighted the mood. Her ability to crack a joke was a blessing to us all. She lived life on her own terms and declared it unapologetically.

Her greatest joy in this life were her son and grandchildren. Tracie loved her son, Devin, with all her heart and soul. Some of her fondest memories were watching him grow up and becoming a wrestler. Her love and devotion to him was fierce and unwavering.

Spending time with her grandchildren, Xavier and Cadence, was her greatest treasure. She would love on them, laugh and plan adventures from fishing at #1 pond, lemonade stands, to snuggles while watching tv.

She was always ready to ride her motorcycle, to feel the wind in her hair. She loved Halloween, watching all her costumes throughout the years was amazing. Her favorite was Pennywise, but any scary clown would do.

You could find her anywhere her friends were, always ripping and roaring, ready to go. If there was someone in need, Tracie would be there no matter what. Her loyalty was undying. Her spirit and love for her family and friends is a gift we will always treasure. Her joy shown not only through her smile but through her eyes. Her infectious laughter was our greatest gift. You couldn't help but laugh with her no matter what the situation, she had an ability to lift you up and keep you your spirits high.

Tracie is Predeceased by Stepfather Ray Hayes, Stepmother Linda Labrador Binette, and her baby brother Harley Rich.

Tracie is survived by her beloved son Devin Brennan, Partner and love Scott Berube, Parents Stanley G. Daney Jr. and Tambre L. Daney, Sisters Jennifer Escoto, Raeven Rich, Angel Everett and Dawn Lacasse, Brother Jason Cote, her grandchildren Ava Brennan, Xavier Brennan and Cadence Johnson, nephew Henry Escoto Jr, and Niece Alexandria Escoto.

They enjoyed living on the lake most of their lives where they enjoyed swimming, water skiing, sailing, ice skating and snowmobiling.

John "Jack" Johnson

Jack worked for Pratt and Whitney in Hartford, Connecticut for many years. When the North Berwick plant was proposed, he was thrilled to consider a move to Maine and was instrumental in the establishment of that new facility.

The Hoarder's Widow

The Hoarder's Widow is a book about loving, hoarding, submitting, and grieving. It is serialized here weekly in chapter form. Read, learn, enjoy.

CHAPTER 17 Bob's villages, Part 1

One of Bob's favorite villages was the Massabesic Health Resources. It is about six miles from our home and where Bob did his physical therapy after his knee replacement. Several days a week, Bob would gladly be up by 4:45 A.M., preparing for his trip to therapy and his newfound friends. He was always the first customer there, ready to get the news of the day from the nice lady who opened the gym doors. Even after Bob no longer needed physical therapy for his knee, he kept going to "his gym" for exercising and swimming.

Bob would do his knee exercises as required and then go into the pool.

Lots of ladies of various sizes were trying to get in shape after their double, hot fudge brownie sundae with walnuts and whipped cream from the previous night. According to Bob, the women usually stood in the water chit-chatting about what was happening in their part of the world. Bob enjoyed getting in on the latest "gym gossip" and Waterboro news. While there, Bob would see or be told of something that needed repairing and would wiggle his way into getting the job. That led to his using the gym for free and saving twenty-five dollars a month. Bob was proud of the jobs he did, jobs that were important for the safety and comfort of clients.

His first repair was replacing the grab bar beside the toilet in the women's bathroom. A woman who tried using the one in place must have leaned too hard on it. It pulled out of the wall. Bob had quite a time making sure "his" work, "his" grab bar, did not come out even if a 500-pound gorilla used it for support. Bob loved solving problems and worked days and sometimes nights to get them perfect and safe!

Bob's second job was fixing the ladder railing that went into the pool. Someone had pulled too hard on the railing and it came out of both the cement and tile. He took me to see his "job". Bob worked for days getting that just so, even being allowed to go to the gym after dark when no one was there. Bob got the praise he wanted (and needed) and saved another twenty-five dollars.

All the time, as you can imagine, I was hoping and praying Bob would spend a little of that time and effort on some of the projects he promised to finish up on our fake antique, colonial. Not only was I jealous of the green Stanley Thermos, but now I was envious of the gym and the new friends he was making at 5:30 A.M., in the dawn of the day.

I wrote the following letter to "Bob's Gym" after his death:

"Massabesic Health Resources, Feb. 17, 2015, Dear Staff and Friends, Bob loved his junkets to "The Gym"! You all were a huge part of why he enjoyed his knee exercising and swimming so much! Home he would come, and in great detail, he tell me the latest, greatest, most interesting news and gossip. I heard about your trips, good restaurants, bad restaurants, grandbabies, illnesses, birthday parties, antique cars, antique people, low-cal brownie recipes, repairs to be done, the parking lot's lighting situation, the rail in the pool. "The Gym" was a major highlight for him. Your caring made it that way. Thank you for listening, letting "Bob be Bob", and inviting good old Bob in his thirty-year-old bathing suit to become an integral part of Waterboro's physical therapy life! Carol Niles"

I wrote the following Thank You Letter to Bob's beloved dentist and staff on Feb. 24, 2015:

"Dear Dr. Adams, Mary, and Jane, When Bob broke something on his partial, or a filling cracked, or he chipped another tooth, he was HAPPY—not over the problem but over being able to see his old buddies at his dentist's office. He didn't seem to mind the pain or the inconvenience of going to Portland because he was going to hear about the latest in dentistry, see the newest tools, and experience your caring, affirming treatment once again. Bob spoke of you often, recounting stories of how he first ended up in Dr. Adams's office, how Bob saved the office from expensive water damage, and how he got an insider's view of all the new technology you are using. He cared about all of you. When he died, I knew you would want to know because he sensed that you liked him and were pleased to have him come for another "visit". He often came home with a few worn-out dental picks or bent mirrors and many new engineering ideas. Thank you for giving Bob clean teeth, fresh breath, and care.

Perhaps you knew Bob was quite a saver and keeper. Just Sunday night, while cleaning out a bureau drawer in his office, a drawer that probably had not been touched since about 1985, I found the enclosed and couldn't think of a finer, more worthy group to give it to. The envelope is labeled, "Bob's Baby Teeth". It looks like he drew the picture of the smiley mouth with the big teeth when he was about eight years old. Inside the envelope are Bob's baby teeth. Please, no fighting over who gets this cherished "Bob" treasure!

Thanks to you all again for what you did for Bob which was always more than just taking care of his teeth! God bless, Carol Niles"

Next week, more about "Bob's Villages."
