Fashion from trash

BY CYNTHIA MATTHEWS

This is the time of year when we often hear stories of high school proms, and creative students who make their own formal wear from things like gum wrappers, pages from books or duct tape. “Rubbish on the Runway,” an after school Fashion Club at Sacopee Valley Middle School, has also been getting creative.

Teacher Rachelle Averill came up with the idea one day when she was watching a documentary about designer Alexander McQueen. “We live on a beautiful planet! I get overwhelmed by plastic pollution,” she said. Averill has a degree in Marine Biology. “It just hit me like a bolt of lightning,” she said. “A Fashion Show with trash!” The idea combined her love for fashion, creativity and design with conservation as well.

Every Wednesday after school since January, 22 girls have been meeting to explore and create – what could they make out of every day trash? “I wanted to give the girls the opportunity to find inspiration in unique places, to use what we have, and that you can find beauty in strange places.”

Averill talked to the girls about Inspiration – where it comes from, and the feelings you get when you have it. She showed students an example of a dress made out of newspaper that a Sacopee graduate had made. Then, they began to collect trash. They put a box in the cafeteria to collect usable trash and put out all call to staff and students. They then began to design, to set their ideas in motion and create – deciding which trash to use, and putting things together with hot glue, tape and staples.

“These girls have been so creative, so driven. They dove right in!” said Averill. “They have had such positive energy, it’s been such a pleasure to work with them!”

“They feel beautiful in these dresses,” observed Averill, adding that several girls have already asked if they can take theirs home.

Though the Fashion Club was open to grades 4-12, no high schoolers participated. Most of the girls were 4th graders, who were “so into it!”

“What these kids have made from trash is just amazing,” said 4th Grade Teacher Sara Quito.

The girls were able to show off their work and strut their stuff on May 25 at the Kezar Falls Theatre in Porter. To get an idea of what the Fashion Show was like, view the promo at www.smoothfeather.com/news.

These three 5th graders worked together to create a bridesmaid and a wedding dress out of trash. “First we made a normal dress,” said designer, Joslyn Sprague from Ms. Dann’s class. “But we didn’t want our dress like everyone else’s. Ms. Averill showed us how to overlap [fabric - trash].” Wedding dress model, Madison Manning, also from Ms. Dann’s class, added, “It’s springtime, and we know a lot of people are getting married now, so we decided to make a wedding dress!” It is made with 3 to 4 layers of pellet bags, with flowers “that make it ‘pop!’” added Manning. Aiyana Michaud, from Ms. Russell’s class, is wearing the accompanying Bridesmaid dress, a Ms. Averill design, made from dog food bags with pellet bags.

Recovery center makes a difference

In early May, Sarah Goodwin graduated from the Layman Way Recovery Center in Alfred. This unique residential drug and alcohol treatment program has given Goodwin, 39, a chance to live a better life.

Goodwin, who has had a life-long struggle with drugs, especially opiates, was arrested and jailed last summer for aggravated use of a methamphetamine lab. She flourished at the recovery center, which offers a six-month intensive program. Now she has been reunited with her two sons, and the family has moved into York County Shelter Programs’ housing.

Goodwin says the support and caring she received at Layman Way are what changed her life. “This place loved me until I could love myself,” she says.

Travis Greenwood, 31, another recent graduate, also says the caring he felt at Layman Way was the reason he could go through the program successfully. “I have never felt such support,” Greenwood says.

Layman Way Recovery Center opened last May. It was created for people who have been jailed for charges directly related to drug or alcohol use. Untreated, it is likely the substance abuser would continue to use alcohol or drugs once released from jail – and perhaps end up in jail again. In an effort to break this cycle, York County Shelter Programs partnered with the county’s district attorney’s office and county government to create the recovery center.

Layman Way is unique in Maine – and perhaps in the country – as it is supported by local taxpayers through county government. Its founders had initially sought state and/or federal funding, but discovered that no monies were available for the recovery center they envisioned.

Individuals who are jailed for alcohol or drug use and are considered non-violent, and who also may be incarcerated because they lack financial resources to make bail, are screened for referral. With approval by the district attorney and a judge, an individual moves to the center, which can house up to 12 men and 12 women. Residents receive intensive support, which includes group and individual counseling.

RECOVERY CENTER

12-step support, such as Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous and Young People in Recovery, medication assistance treatment (MAT) (medication for people withdrawing from opiates,) family support groups, mentor programs, and case workers who help residents plan for life following graduation. A local adult education program offers classes there, and wellness activities are offered. The Center also provides after-care, with counseling and support available for those who have successfully completed the program.

Fifty six people were admitted to the program over the past year. Seventeen successfully completed the six-month program. Those numbers speak to the difficulties inherent to breaking substance addictions.

The numbers make the program a success. York County manager Greg Zinser says, "The commissioners and I are very pleased with the success of Layman Way Recovery Center, and we are grateful for the ongoing support of the budget committee. Layman Way is a testament to a solid partnership with the office of the district attorney and York County Shelter Programs as we all seek to combat the opioid crisis."

York County Shelter Programs CEO Bob Dawber is also pleased with the center's first year. "On the first anniversary of Layman Way Recovery Center, we are celebrating those whose lives have been renewed as a result of their work in recovery," Dawber says. "Working in partnership with the county gives us more resources as we address substance abuse – especially Maine's ongoing opioid crisis. We had many success stories this year. Credit also goes to our compassionate staff, who offer hope to all who enter the program."

Both Goodwin and Greenwood had been battling addictions for years.

Goodwin, a graduate of Bonny Eagle High School, had been using drugs since she was 16. After she became a mother, she was clean for 12 years. A few years ago she began to use methamphetamines. Charges are still pending; she will be placed on probation.

Goodwin says of that time when she was arrested, "I was so broken. So tired. So hopeless. I felt like giving up." She regained some hope when she heard of the Layman Way program and was accepted into it.

Greenwood, a Windham native, had also given up. He says that when he was arrested for trafficking fentanyl last year he was relieved. He was so addicted to the drug that it no longer gave him a high; he shot up just to stop the sweating and sickness he felt when he woke up every morning. He was working seven days a week as a sub-contractor in order to make money to buy fentanyl. He says he was in a cycle that was leaving him suicidal.

Greenwood had been using drugs since he was 14. He has been to treatment several times. Layman Way was different, he says, because of the intensive support given residents. "Support, love, dedication...that's what makes this place stand out," he says. "They cared about me when I couldn't care about myself."

Greenwood has found sub-contracting work with a contractor who is also in recovery. He has reconnected with his 11-year-old son. He has reconnected with numerous family members who had given up on him. Greenwood is still facing federal charges that may carry a sentence of five to 10 years. "But you know, no matter what, I can do it sober," Greenwood says. "I am not scared of tomorrow. I embrace it."

York County District Attorney Kathryn Slattery feels the center is making great strides towards change. "A year ago York County embarked on its mission of hope for individuals who battle addiction and are enmeshed in the criminal justice system," Slattery says. "Layman Way has created a path for its residents to move out of the criminal justice system and into society. Steps toward recovery are steps toward a safer community for all of us. I continue to be grateful for the county's support of its residents through Layman Way."

INLAND FISHERIES & WILDLIFE NEWS

Moose lottery June 8 at Cabela's

The Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife in conjunction with Cabela's will hold the annual moose lottery at the Cabela's Scarborough store this Saturday, June 8. Starting at 2 p.m., the names of the winners will be read.

Since 1999, the Department has rotated the lottery location throughout the state. Prior to 1999, it was always held in Augusta. In more recent years, lotteries have been held in Skowhegan, Greenville, Presque Isle, Bethel, Kittery and Caribou. Next year's moose permit lottery location will be announced at this year's lottery.

Cabela's plans a variety of events for those going to the lottery, including seminars by MDIFW Moose Biologist Lee Kantar and Game Warden Lieutenant Tom Ward, a moose calling contest, as well as kids games and events.

There is no charge to attend the lottery and the reading of names is expected to last 3 hours. This year, 2,820 permits will be drawn in the random chance lottery from a pool of over 59,185 applicants.

Maine's moose hunt is designed to manage the moose population. By modifying the number and type of moose permits available to hunters, the department can manage the moose population in order to provide for hunting and viewing opportunities, maintain a healthy moose population, and limit the number of moose/vehicle accidents.

For those prospective moose hunters who can't make it to the lottery drawing, the names of permit winners will be posted on the Department's web site starting at 6:00 p.m. on the day of the event. Visit mefishwildlife.com to access the list once it has been posted.

WATER TALKS Dragons & Damsels of New Hampshire

The Acton Wakefield Watersheds Alliance (AWWA), the Gafney Library in Sanbornville, NH and the Acton Public Library in Acton, have joined together again this year for a new round of "Water Talks", a free series of presentations by experts in their fields. The talks are free and open to the public and the location will alternate between the Wakefield Opera House (2 High St, Sanbornville) and the Acton Town Hall (35 H Road, Acton).

Join us for the last talk of 2019, on Wednesday, June 12, at the Acton Town Hall at 2 p.m. Pam Hunt of NH Audubon will discuss the fascinating world of the insect order Odonata. You may be familiar with the dragonflies buzzing over your yard in the summer, or the damselflies that land on your kayak, but what do you REALLY know about these ancient insects? This program provides an overview of the biology and ecology of dragonflies and damselflies, from their amazing life cycle (content alert: some pretty crazy reproductive behavior is involved!) to their incredible diversity. It also highlights a few of NH's notable species and their stories, and closes with some results from the "NH Dragonfly Survey," a five year volunteer-based project that documented the distribution of these insects across the state.

Pam Hunt has been interested in birds since the tender age of 12, when an uncle took her to Brigantine National Wildlife Refuge in NJ. She went on to earn a B.S. in biology from Cornell University,

COURTESY PHOTO

M.A. in zoology from the University of Montana, and a Ph.D. from Dartmouth College in 1995. Pam came to NH Audubon in 2000 after five years as adjunct faculty at Colby-Sawyer College in New London. In her current position as Avian Conservation Biologist, she works closely with NH Fish and Game to coordinate and prioritize bird research and monitoring in the state, and also authored NH's "State of the Birds" report.

The Acton Wakefield Watersheds Alliance, a non-profit established in 2005, is dedicated to protecting and restoring the water quality of the lakes, ponds, rivers and streams of Wakefield, New Hampshire and the border region of Acton, Maine. Find us www.awwatersheds.org or on Facebook.

The Gafney Library serves the towns of Wakefield and Brookfield and looks forward to having the opportunity to present this series of educational, relative and informative talks to its residents. Find us at www.gafneylibrary.org or on Facebook.

Does My Indoor Cat/Dog Need A Rabies Vaccine?

Rabies is a deadly virus that affects the central nervous system and brain of mammals. It is zoonotic, meaning it can be transmitted from mammal to mammal including humans. There is no cure once rabies is contracted in animals. Cats are the most common domestic animal to test positive for rabies.

The rabies vaccine and a rabies certificate are required by Maine state law and are mandatory in cats and dogs. Cats and dogs are able to receive the rabies vaccine at 12 weeks of age. The law does not provide exceptions for inside pets. This vaccine can last for 1-3 years depending on the animals age and previous vaccine status. This vaccine is a killed vaccine and therefore cannot cause the rabies virus.

Signs of rabies can vary from drooling, central nervous system issues, (seizures, staggering, disorientation, and paralysis), difficulty swallowing, aggression, or personality changes. If your pet is bitten or has any wound of unknown origin (bite or wound that was not witnessed), you should seek immediate medical attention from your veterinarian. Depending on your pets vaccine status, the state guidelines may require a rabies booster and/or an observation or quarantine period.

Top Trojans 14-10

Massabesic stormed out of the locker room after half-time and posted seven consecutive goals to help lift them to a 14-10 opening round playoff win over visiting Thornton Academy in varsity girls' lacrosse (not field hockey, faithful readers!) on Wednesday, June 5. Skylar Renaud, Kenzy Ouellette and Emily Jacobs each scored twice in the first half, but the Mustangs were sloppy, turning the ball over and allowing the Trojans, whom they destroyed 13-2 in a regular season match back in late April, stay in the game...for a little while.

Cailyn Forrester scored 42 seconds into the second half to make it 7-6. Ouellette, who added two assists to the scoring sheet, finished off her hat trick four minutes later and Brianna Stephenson made it 9-6 at the 6:20 mark. Micaela Jacobs scored two minutes later and Cam Champlin tossed in what ended up being the game winner at 13:40.

Renaud scored the next two goals to give her four on the night and turn a 6-6 potential nightmare into a laugher at 13-6. Massabesic emptied their bench for the last five minutes and the Trojans chipped into the lead, scoring four of the last five goals. Katie Castle made eight saves in goal.

The Mustangs (10-3) are scheduled to host Gorham in the Class A semi-finals on Saturday, June 8 at 6 p.m. The Rams (11-2) fell to the visting Mustangs 6-2 in a regular season tilt back on May 28.

Gold for New

Mustang Syeira New ran a personal best 45.50 in the 300-meter hurdles, setting the Massabesic High School record, blowing away the field and capturing first place gold at the annual varsity Track and Field Class A State Championships held Saturday, June 1 at Lewiston High School. Scarborough's Emily Labbe was a distant second with a 46.29. Kylie Bedard was third in 46.84. No one else in the field was under 47.30.

Last year at the State Championships New was 8th with a 48.52. Annah Rossvall won the event with a 45.85. New's time this year was the best at this event since 2015, and in the neighborhood of record holder Peyton Dostie's 44.67, who set the mark as a Scot in 2011.

New was 6th last year in the 100-hurdles with a 16.30. She crossed in 16.06 (7th) this year, but she's been dominant in the 300 for much of the season. Last week at Southwesterns the senior easily won with a 46.51. At the annual York County meet on May 18 she was 2nd (Bedard was first) with a 47.83 and four days prior to that she was first (48.40) in Kennebunk at a five-team event. At Noble on May 7 she was second with a 49.47.

Sign up now for summer history camp

S.T.E.A.M Summer History Camp registration is now open for a week of fun at 19th Century Curran Village at 70 Elm Street in Newfield. The STEAM, Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Mathematics, is similar to the one that was offered last winter during the February vacation week. Kids will have a hands-on learning experience with many aspects of these programs from the early days. The program is for kids ages 8-13 and they will learn many things, such as: woodworking, pinhole photography with Ann Thompson, bookbinding, fiber arts with Rhonda Junkins, cooking, baking, candle making, hand sewing, landscape painting, traditional rug hooking and much more.

Director Robert Schmick would like to see the camp filled up by the end of June. The cost of the history camp is $165 per camper for 4 days, and $155 each for additional siblings. STEAM. will be held from July 22-25, from 9 am. to 3 p.m. each day.

Go to the website: curranhomestead.org, to see the entire list of workshops. All workshops will be held at 70 Elm Street. Call the museum to register at: 207 205-4849.

Also back this summer are the popular Bean Suppers, which will be held on Saturdays: June 29, July 27, Aug. 31, and Sept. 28. They will be held in the old Sandwich Shop from 5-7 p.m. and are $10 per person and $8 for seniors.

On July 27, the Yankee Brass Band will be playing at the museum for a special concert and supper. The concert will be held from 6:30-7:30 p.m., and the cost of the evening is $20 per person and $35 per couple. And of course, there will be carousel rides offered on all of the days that they are open.

The museum also has a new collection of Model T cars this year, which will be on display in the carriage house. Thanks to Isaac Hughes, of New York, who donated them.

There are a few things on their wish list, which would be a great help in the day to day operations of the museum. Pick up a recent newsletter at the museum to see it, and see if there is anything that you could help them with in making it an even better experience for young and old.

The King family first opened Willowbrook Museum in 1970, making this year, their 50th year of operation as an "educational resource." Just a few years ago the name was changed and it became part of the Curran Homestead, with a campus in Orrington, Maine and Newfield. For more information on becoming a member go to curranhomestead.org.

Donations needed

Donations for the 36th annual Funshine Fair at St. Matthew's Catholic Church at 19 Dora Lane in Limerick will start on Sunday, June 16. The sale of clothing, etc. will start on July 22 through the end of the fair. The annual Funshine Fair will be held on Saturday and Sunday, July 27 and 28.

Wildlife sightings

The little fox that has been traveling around the neighborhood was in my yard the other day, just playing on the grass. He stayed for quite a while, and then walked out of the driveway and down the street. The next day when I came home, he crawled out from under my front steps, as if welcoming me back home - yikes, not sure what to do now!

And, just the other day, a bald eagle flew over my house, and I'm pretty sure that he tipped his wing to say hello.

Finally, I saw my first dragon fly the other day, so that means, bye-bye black flies!

Happy birthday!

Birthday wishes this week go to: Jim Campbell, Rhoby Treadwell, Denise Carpenter, Dwayne Phillips, Sandy Plette, Jason Lofgren and Rex Connell.
